Obv: Farsi legend Noor al-Din Jahangir Shah Akbar Shah.

Rev: Month, Mint, AH and RY details.

Jahangir abolished his heavier weight standard in his 6th regnal year and initiated a series of coins with nominative legends with elaborate borders for each month of issue. This series was substituted by designs which remained stable for every month of issue but were engraved using the cursive Naskhi calligraphy instead of the hanging Nastaliq which had been the mainstay of Mughal coin design. Examples of the high artistry of Jahangir's coinage, these gold issues comprise some of the most elegant coins of Jahangir's reign. Superb Quality, Extra Fine+ Exceedingly rare.

253. Assam, Ahom kingdom – silver rupee of Chakradhwaja Simha or Siu-pung-mung (1663-1670), Ahom script legends, Rhodes-Bose B10.5.
Obv: Ahom legend Kāo / boi Phā / Tā-rā / heu ceu in dotted border Rev: Ahom legend Chao Phā / Siu-pung-mu/ ng pin can / Lāk-ni / plek ngi, small lion at the bottom, cutting across dotted border.
Chakradhwaja Simha tried to free him off any vestige of Mughal suzerainty that was imposed on the Ahom kingdom through a treaty signed by his predecessor Jayadhwaja Simha. To this effect, he appears to have initiated a coinage in the local Ahom script and language with his Ahom name and an invocation to local deity Pha Tara. Another feature initiated by him is the incorporation of a small animal in the margin – in this case, a lion. Extra Fine+, Very Rare.

- 258. Assam, Ahom kingdom – Gold octagonal mohur of Rajeshwara Simha (1751-1769), 11.21 grams, Farsi legends, Rangpur mint, dated SE1685, Rhodes-Bose O86.1
 Obv: Farsi inscription Zad Ain Sikka chu Khursheed Mah / Sultan Sri Rajasar Singh Alam Panah
 Rajeshwara Simha was the first Ahom ruler to strike coins in certain 'one off' types – like issues with Farsi script and/or on rectangular flans. The choice of verse inscription is indeed a novelty for Ahom coinage. The legend given by Rhodes-Bose is erroneous; the correct inscription is as given above read by Dr Shailen Bhandare. There are only 2 known specimens of this coin. The second one is at the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge, UK.

- 259. Nawabs of Bengal – Alivardi Khan (1740 – 1756), silver rupee in the name of Ahmad Shah Bahadur, Murshidabad mint, RY2, cinquefoil mint mark on reverse. RY2 of Ahmad Shah Bahadur began on 8 April (Julian) 1749. This year was a crucial year for the relationship between Alivardi Khan and Raghoji Bhosle, the Maratha general and ruler of Nagpur. The animosity between the two had come to a head in this year and Raghoji, taking advantage of the rift between the Nawab and his courtiers like Mir Habib the governor of Orissa, managed to impose a heavy tribute on him. Negotiations continued for two years and in 1752 a treaty was signed between the Nawab and the Marathas in which the Nawab agreed to pay 15 lac rupees as annual tribute.
 The coins of Ahmad Shah of Murshidabad mint show a small four-pointed mark on obverse in second line of inscription. It has been suggested that this mark probably has some connection with the dealings between the Nawabs and the Marathas, as from RY3 it is replaced with a sunburst emblem. However this is open for interpretation and by no means a conclusive observation.

277. Tripura – silver tanka of Ratna Manikya (1464-1489), dated Shaka Era 1386, Rhodes-Bose Tripura 18.

Obv: stylized lion with two crosses above head, facing left'; Bangla legend Shri Shri Durgga-aradhana-apta Vijayah Ratnapure Shaka 1386 Rev: Bangla legend Shri Narayana / Charana para / Shri Shri Ratna Man/ nikya Devah Ratna Manikya initiated an independent silver coinage in Tripura, most likely drawing from his experience in Gaur, the capital city of the Sultans of Bengal, where he spent some years as a hostage. The style of the lion is evidently copied from the 'lion'-type tankas of Bengal but the choice of inscriptions and invocations is decidedly not Islamic. On this type, the obverse invokes Durga and attributes the issue of the coin in Ratnapura to the worship of the goddess ('Durga – Aradhana') Almost Uncirculated, Very Rare, Graded by NGC.

281. Tripura – Gold ‘Nazarana’ mohur of Veerachandra Manikya (1869-1896), with Queen Rajeshwari, Shake Era 1791, Rhodes=Bose Tripura 285.
Rev: inscription in Bangla script and Sanskrit language – Radha Krishna pade / Sri Sri Yuta Vira Chandra / Manikya Deva Sri Sri / mati Rajeshwari Maha / Devyau Veerachandra Manikya succeeded in 1862 but was officially installed in 1870, which corresponds with the date on the coin. At this time, there was no circulatory coinage struck in Tripura.
The gold coins were struck for ceremonial purposes such as to pay the 125 tanka tribute to the British. After two years, Tripura managed to get such ceremonial coins struck mechanically in Great Britain. Exceedingly rare, Mint Grade.

Obv: Farsi legend Sikka Mubarak Sahib Qiran Thani Muhammad Akbar Badshah Ghazi; umbrella and cinquefoil symbols. Rev: mint-name and RY in 'Julus' formula.

By 1810, when this coin was struck, the authority of the Mughal emperor was only nominal and the real power rested in the hands of the East India Company. However, the mint in Shahjahanabad was kept operational, mainly to produce coins for ceremonial purposes, such as when the British Resident paid official visit to the king three or four times a year. This coin is evidently struck for such a purpose, judging by its wide size and by its milled edge. Milling was introduced by the Company on its mechanically produced coinage in Bengal and must have been considered as an unusual feature. It cannot be ascertained if this milled edge is a result of a mechanical device or is applied by hand. However, it is undoubtedly a highly unusual feature. There is no other specimen known with Milled edge, Extra Fine+, Exceedingly Rare, Unique Specimen.

Burma Issues

Burma was separated from The Indian empire in 1935 when the government of India Act came into force. However, the financial affairs of Burma continued to be managed by the Indian Government. This gave rise to a situation wherein the Central Monetary Authority of India issued notes for Burma. This is the only instance where one country issued notes that were current in another during a civilian rule, the Reserve Bank of India closed its operations in Burma in September 1946 and the notes were withdrawn on 1st June 1950.
